ANSWERS MR. SIMS

Replies to Criticisms Aimed at Him by Tennesseean Who Seeks His Seat.

CALLS REPRESENTATIVE NON-RESIDENT OF STATE

Explains Absence From Washington During Sessions of Congress. Always Supported President.

Senator Luke Lea, who is in Tennes see, his home state, has made reply to the criticisms aimed at him by Repre sentative Thetus W. Sims, when Mr Sims announced his candidacy for the Senate, in opposition to Senator Lea last Monday. Senator Lea's reply was as follows:

"The announcement received from Washington, where Representative Sims resides, is most interesting. If I am to be succeeded in the Senate by non-resident of the state. I would for personal reasons rather be succeeded intimate and cordial until the senatorial bee began to buzz around the 'judge's' sylphlike form last January. Since my term of office began it has been my privilege to enjoy two or three hours of his company each day I was in Washington. He has repeatedly until the last few months expressed fulsome admiration of my course in the Senate and out of it, going so far as to say in many of our interviews that he alone considered my welfare, as he would regard it as little short of a calamity for my public service to be terminated, and other 'sweet sayings,' the recollection of which make me will be sent to Fort Washington, and, for duty.

Capt. Tenney Ross, 3d Infantry, is detailed as a member of the General Staff Corps, vice Capt. Howard L. Laubach, relieved. Capt. Ross will report to the chief of staff for duty.

First Lieut. William A. Alfonte, Signary of the most important distinction—two of the most important distinction—two of the most important and lucrative offices of the government of the District of Columbia, where they also reside.

"Representative Sims announces that he is a candidate for the 'existing vacancy' in the Senate, to which I might add 'a non-resident candidate.' There are two kinds of 'absenteeism,' one where the member of Congress is absent from the Capitol while Congress also reside. is in session, and the other where the member of Congress is absent from the state or district when Congress is not in the Senate, when circumstances over which I have no control rendered i impossible for my family to be in Washington, I have been compelled to be away from the Capitol more than have desired. For this I have much regret, but not one word of apology to offer. It is equally true that Repre-sentative Sims has been almost con-tinuously absent from his state and district, except during some of his campaigns for re-election, when Congress was not in session until he is regarded as a resident of the District of Columbia, where his family resides. If the democrats of Tennessee desire to be represented in the upper house of Congress by a resident of Washington, who will be there all the time, whether Congress is in session or not touch and sympathy with his people, ignorant of their needs, unmindful of Ensign W. Refers to Record.

"My attendance will be discussed here after more fully. Suffice it now to say that an impartial comment has been made upon a part of it already. Collier's Weekly has recently prepared a record of the vote of senators upon the most important measures during the last session of Congress, and it shows that I have missed only three more roll that I have missed only three more that calls than my colleague, and that many senators have missed many more than either of us. Hence, Representative Sims' criticism is leveled with equal impartiality at both his friend and impartiality at both his friends under mentor, Senator Shields and myself. "The indictment that the representa-tive draws against me relative to the Jackson post office is not only drawn against me, but against the entire Senate, for it is by its rules, sanctioned b a century of precedents, that the ac-tion was permitted of which he complains so bitterly, and which he make his paramount issue in his campaigr to have the District of Columbia given a seat in the Senate.

"Our own little father used simply to stagger us with his nonchalance," writes the officer. "Often we would enjoin him to keep away from the danger zone, away from shells and bullets flying in all directions. All he would say would be, "They cannot touch me; I am a neutral." In vain did we point out to him that stray bullets do not respect anybody's neutrality.

"Once he was seen promenading just by the Austrian trenches. The Aus-
